Rosetta heads into third quarter with customer 8000

Wednesday 3 July, 2013

Rosetta Translation celebrates the addition of client 8000 to their books signalling a promising third quarter.
The London-based translation company continues to go from strength to strength not only by winning repeat business and maintaining their high levels of customer satisfaction, but also with the addition of their 8000th client. The reputable language services provider finished 2012 with over 7000 clients and continues to add to its impressive database.

The dedicated London team are all pleased with the continued success of the company, and tirelessly work to keep new and old customers happy. Eric Fixmer, the founder of the company in 2004, is still firmly involved with the London office, though he focusses a lot of his attention on Rosetta Translation's Shanghai office. As with previous customer milestones Dr Fixmer once again shares his praise and pride "I am very proud that Rosetta still exceeds expectations and never ceases to build on its success at all levels. All staff work hard to provide an outstanding service, which is only proven in the fact our customer base continues to grow. I must not forget to mention that our existing customers are just as important as our new ones and we strive in our efforts for client satisfaction. I believe that these efforts are more than a success."

Head of Marketing and Business Development, Manchandan Sumray, can only back up Dr Fixmer's praise. "It's important to office morale, to see that we are continuing to grow as a company, and that there are many opportunities to expand despite the prevailing economic climate. It shows that we are as competitive as we have ever been and that clients consistently come to us for our value for money and high-quality service." Ms Sumray adds "We pride ourselves in being friendly and approachable. No job is too small, or too big. We cater for individuals as much as we do our internatinoal corporate clients. We are confident we can meet everyone's language needs."

Rosetta Translation offers a range of language services primarily focussing on translation and interpreting requirements. Dedicated project managers ensure a comprehensive and efficient service whatever the language request. Ms Sumray concludes by saying "we're approaching the mid-way point of the year, and have only experienced good things so far in 2013. We have every hope, especially with the strong team in the office, that the remainder will be just as successful, if not more so."
