SafetySigns4Less Announces New Range of Wayfinding Signage for Residential Buildings to Meet Updated Fire Safety Regulations

Wednesday 29 March, 2023

The new amendment, found in Fire Safety Approved Document B (Appx. 15.13-15.16), requires all residential buildings with a top storey over 11 meters above ground level (equivalent to more than 3 storeys) to display Wayfinding Signage in stairways.

The new range of Wayfinding Signage displays information on the Stairway designation and the Floor designation, as well as flat numbers found on each level alongside a directional arrow when needed – this provides critical guidance for firefighters in the event of a fire, and can help save lives.

Building owners and managers should take this new regulation seriously, as failure to comply can result in legal action, including hefty fines and even imprisonment. This is why SafetySigns4Less has developed a range of Wayfinding Signs to make compliance as easy as possible.

SafetySigns4Less is one of the UK's leading signs specialists, and to help landlords, councils and property owners meet these new requirements, they announced a new range of Wayfinding Signs that are 100% compliant with the updated regulations.

The new range of signs is designed to make compliance as easy as possible.

With a selection of basic Floor, Stairway, and Flat/Room signs available, in a range of materials from Self-Adhesive Vinyl to Glow in the Dark Rigid Plastic, you can find everything you'll need to comply with the strict legislation.

Don't have exactly what you need? Don't worry!

SafetySigns4Less also offer a Custom Sign builder that allows you to input your own text and numbers, which is perfect for ensuring your Flat designation signs are right for your building. Not only that, but all custom Wayfinding signs will be manually checked and amended by their team of experts to ensure compliance with the new regulations.

This new range of Wayfinding Signage offers a simple and effective solution for ensuring compliance with the latest Fire Safety Regulations amendment.
