Sandi From Gogglebox Teams Up With 15-Year-Old Singer-Songwriter, Jack Rose

Wednesday 30 November, 2016

Sandi Bogle from Channel 4's Gogglebox has teamed up with 15-year-old singer-songwriter, Jack Rose, to release a brand new single for Christmas.

The 15-year-old from Kent has been singing since he was very young and has always wanted to try and raise some money for a good cause.

So, back in June, Jack approached Sandi, who loved the idea of doing a song with him, and the two joined forces to release their own version of the Christmas classic, "White Christmas", made famous by Bing Crosby.

Obviously, the cost of producing a single does not come cheap, so Jack contacted Kevin Thorpe at Big Jam Studios, who agreed to record the track; musician, Ricky Patel, who plays the acoustic guitar; Mastering Engineer, Shane The Cutter; and renowned artist, The Doodle Man, who has created the single cover - all of whom offered their services for free.

The single, which is available to preorder on iTunes now and will be on general release from the 23rd of December, is expected to help raise some money for a great cause.

The single can also be pre-ordered from the following URL: http://www.christmas-song.co.uk

Both Jack and Sandi are hoping that the single will do well and are proud to be supporting Great Ormond Street Hospital.
