

Scottish Company Offers Beach Booking Reservation free to local authorities

Friday 26 June, 2020

Officials in beach resorts and parks around the country are declaring a "major incident" after thousands of people flocked to local beauty spots & beaches.

Crowds are coming to enjoy the hot weather. Despite advice to stay away from the beach and park areas many are being overrun with cars and sunbathers, leading to gridlock, illegal parking and anti-social behaviour.

To help alleviate this issue TT (Total Tickets) will provide free of charge its software systems to any local authority to allow them to provide an online reservation system for any area beset with these issues. This would allow a controlled pre booking system to allow people to book a space in advance. The systems are capable of fairly distributing the available resources to stop people from booking too often.

Rather than a blanket ban numbers can be controlled in this way and local authorities know who is coming in advance. People will also be aware that they will be welcomed if they have taken the trouble to pre-book an allocated space.
