SME workforce lead voting turnout for UK general election

- Small business (SME) owner intention to vote on May 7th is running at 93% (up to 98% in some regions).
- In 2010, voting turnout among SME owners was 80% (versus a general turnout of 65%).
- 67% of SME owners say they'll be encouraging their staff to vote.
- 55% of SMEs allowing staff voting during working hours.

Research commissioned by MakeItCheaper.com suggests that SMEs will lead voting turnout at the 2015 UK General Election with 93% of SME owners intending to vote and two thirds (67%) encouraging their staff to do the same. Over half (55%) will allow their staff to vote during business hours (around 8.4 million employees¹). The figures compare favorably to the 80% of SME owners who voted in the 2010 Election, where the general turnout was just 65%.

The North East is set to have the highest turnout amongst SME business owners, with 98% intending to visit the polling stations on May 7th. The region with the lowest intended turnout is the West Midlands with 90% - which is still 25% higher than the general turnout of 2010.

A breakdown of voting intention by region is shown in the table below:

Location	Will Vote
UK	92.9%
London	93.3%
