

SOAS-BWY Autumn Summit Explores Yoga's Impact on Health and Healing

Thursday 18 July, 2024

The British Wheel of Yoga (BWY) and SOAS University of London (SOAS) will be hosting global experts on yoga and health at their first major summit this Autumn.

Yoga: Health, Harm and Healing will take place on 2 November and is a unique day-long event that brings together seven distinguished scholars and leading yoga practitioners to explore the latest research on yoga and its relationship with health, harm and healing.

Sat Bir Singh Khalsa PhD, Associate Professor of Medicine at Harvard Medical School will headline the event. As an authority on yoga as therapy, he will evaluate the efficacy of yoga for mental health conditions, such as insomnia, chronic stress, and anxiety-related disorders, based on his most recent research findings, and discuss his work that paves the way for integrating yoga therapy into modern medicine.

Professor Rosie Meek from Royal Holloway, University of London, and Rose Parkes, Associate Dean at the Institute of Law in Jersey, will examine yoga's role in rehabilitation and prison reform, which is informed by Prof. Meek's report to the UK Ministry of Justice.

Um? Dinsmore-Tuli PhD, founder of the Yoga Nidra Network, will substantiate the power of rest through Yoganidr? (yogic sleep), a technique that integrates traditional guided visualisation methods with modern relaxation, and challenge ideas that yoga can do no harm. Carola Chiarpenello MSc from Kings College London will present the results of innovative cognitive neuroscience research into Yoganidr? as a tool to downregulate inflammation in the body.

Professor Ulrich Pagel, Chair of SOAS Centre of Yoga Studies, said: " This summit is a testament to the growing interest in understanding yoga's impact on personal and social wellbeing We are excited to provide a platform for experts from diverse fields to converge and explore the research and applications of yoga in the wider community."

Diana O'Reilly, Chair of BWY, said: "Yoga is more than a physical practice; it's a holistic path to wellness. Through this summit, we aim to bridge the gap between academic research and practical application, unraveling the potential of integrating yoga into community settings for greater inclusivity."

Attendees can join online or in person, with Earlybird tickets at £60 (in-person) and £30 (online) until Friday 2 August. Prices increase to £70 and £40 after that date.
