Streamline Promotions is a people business; everything they do revolves around human interactions. The firm credits their successful first year in business to the ambitious, competitive and hard working individuals they work with and it is their people that will lead Streamline Promotions to great things.

Here Streamline Promotions reveal their goals for 2016.

1) To invest in people

At Streamline Promotions one of the things that Managing Director, Benjamin Streames, enjoys most about his role as a business owner is being a mentor and teacher to the budding entrepreneurs the firm works with. The supporters of entrepreneurship provide free teaching and learning opportunities to provide their associates with all the necessary skills and knowledge to be able to lead other sales and marketing professionals.

2) To assemble a solid core of people

One of the main objectives for Streamline Promotions in 2016 is to assemble a solid core of people who can be responsible for the next generation of successful entrepreneurs to come from Streamline Promotions.

They want to assist the rising stars they work with to further develop by the end of the year, and as a result of their investment in education and training, allows them to be able to build their own company in the future.

3) Build momentum

Streamline Promotions aren't satisfied with achieving small goals, they want to turn hills into mountains. The young firm have had a great start to their first year in business and they want to build momentum to make 2016 a stand out year.

“The only way for an individual or a business to grow and develop is to consistently set new goals," said Managing Director at Streamline Promotions, Benjamin Streames. At Streamline Promotions they regularly host optional seminars and tutorials for their associates to educate them in all aspects of their business fundamentals, as well as motivating and inspiring them. Goal setting is one of the key points they focus on.

Streamline Promotions is a Bristol based PR, Promotions and Sales firm that offer businesses throughout the South West a wide range of face-to-face event marketing solutions. The firm meet with their clients' customers directly and open up a mutual line of communication, which helps to develop long lasting customer relationships. Still a relatively young firm, they have experienced great success to date and they believe it is because of their dedication to never settling for the position they are in and constantly striving to get better.
