?Surprise spectacle at London Euston

Tuesday 15 December, 2015

A national heart charity will be delivering a surprise spectacle to London Euston train station on Saturday 19th December.

Little Hearts Matter support families when a child has been diagnosed with half a working heart and this Christmas they've teamed up with Virgin Trains' to deliver some festive joy and raise awareness.

The surprise will take place at London Euston train station at about 1:10pm and will last approximately three minutes. Suzie Hutchinson, Chief Executive at Little Hearts Matter said: “We are so excited to be bringing Little Hearts Matter to Euston station on the 19th of December. What a great opportunity to raise awareness and much needed funds at this important London station.

“Living with only half a heart can be scary at times for the children, and their mums and dads. Christmas can be a fantastic or a challenging time for LHM families so it is very kind of Virgin trains to host many of our families at the station on the day. We have a great surprise up our sleeves at about 1.15pm.”

The heart charity promises to deliver excitement and high energy to the London station, but the spectacle will last for only three minutes, see spectators will need to be on time!
