Syrac Inspirations share their 6 steps to success:

1. Emotional intelligence (EQ) - EQ is the ability to recognise and understand emotions in yourself and others as well as the ability to use this awareness to manage behavior and relationships. Research was conducted by TalentSmart and their idea was to pin EQ against 33 important workplace skills. The study found that in terms of performance 90% of top achievers also demonstrated high levels of EQ. And only 20% of top performers displayed high EQ.

2. Time management – To ensure maximum effectiveness of time management is achieved, it is important to manage the 'tyranny of the urgent'. This means ensuring those little jobs that require urgent attention don't scupper the big jobs that are equally as time sensitive. Once time management skills are fine-tuned, it is often found to result in an increase in spare time.

3. Listening – When listening it is important to be present in the moment, actually digesting the information presented. It is also crucial when listening have an open mind, and be open to new ideas.

4. Asking for help – To ensure progress is made in any area of life, it is important to practice humility and courage. By asking for help it will ensure a task is completed faster and to a higher standard.

5. Getting high-quality sleep – To ensure maximum brain capacity it is important to ensure adequate amounts of proper sleep. When this is achieved, creativity will flow easier and problem solving will become second nature too.

6. Staying positive – Maintaining positivity in extreme circumstances will magnify the ability to source a solution or create an avenue for resolution. It is important to only focus on external factors that can be controlled directly.
