

Tantalising Tiles - Tileclick Launches Brand New Website

Friday 7 February, 2014

Since 2004, online tile retailer Tileclick has been supplying trade and members of the public with a wide range of tiles at competitive prices. Tileclick has gone through a transformation over the years; starting out in 2004 as the first solely online tile retailer here in the UK, it has gone from strength to strength and is continually evolving to meet the demands of the British consumer. Retailing products as intricate as tiles online comes with its own challenges but Tileclick have always strived to make their site as user friendly as possible combining exceptional products ranges with cutting edge web design.

Company Director; Jeremy Turner believes that offering the consumer an online shopping experience that is convenient, intuitive and informative is the key to getting it right. "We work hard to continually find ways to make life easier for our customers, with detailed photography, accurate descriptions and specification information on the website I believe that buying tiles with Tileclick is the easiest it has ever been. The best thing, of course, is that we offer so much help and customers don't even need to pack their car with heavy tiles as we deliver right to the door!"

Looking at Tileclick's brand new website it is clear that it has been well thought through, the tiles are well photographed and categorised to help the consumer go straight to the size, the tile type or even the colour that they are looking for. For those that need more inspiration the room set photography shows how the tiles could look once installed and there are lots of ideas for complimentary borders or floor tiles to help you complete the room. For anyone reading who is wondering how easy it is to choose tiles online I would suggest taking a look at this wonderfully innovative website; there really is a wealth of detail even including detailed tile dimensions that covers the thickness of the products and a very reasonable sample service so that you can see the colour or quality of your chosen products before placing your order, what's there not to like!

After looking at the website and chatting with Jeremy it really does feel that Tileclick are making some exciting changes and this can only be a good thing for the busy UK consumer, as buying tiles in this way is surely the ultimate in convenience.
