Kentico gold partner moves to the Tech City area in Central London

London - Following an increase in London-based contracts, Tellonline has decided to open a brand new office in London, on the border of the buzzing areas of Islington and Clerkenwell.

Headed up by Simon Budd, Tellonline has seen tremendous growth over the past few years, attracting many new clients and working on cutting-edge developments for existing customers. The continued prosperity of the company means expansion beyond Devon has become a necessity.

The new office will officially open on the 14th January 2014 with an informal gathering of the established Plymouth team, fellow tenants and existing partners from the city. The offices are at Exmouth House, Islington EC1 0RH.

Simon Budd comments: “We are very happy to be growing operations to London at a time of sustained growth from the capital. We look forward to building on the many relationships that we have and meeting with new partners and clients in the years to come. As Kentico CMS and EMS becomes and even more popular choice for content management and customer experience management we realise the importance of bringing our many years of Kentico expertise to the hub of digital media in the UK.”

“I would like to thank all those who have helped in the work to bring about the new offices and to welcome the new London team who will work closely with those from the Plymouth Studio. The Plymouth team and I are looking forward to spending a lot more time in London working out of our new facilities. It’s a very exciting time.”

Tellonline is a Kentico gold partner that provides a full range of digital services for clients all over the world.
