The Importance of Male Grooming for Professionals

Monday 18 May, 2015

As millions of men across the globe quickly tune into their skin care and grooming needs, we take a look at how important getting to grips with regular cleansing, shaving and moisturising is, when it comes to staying ahead of the game in the workplace.

In an industry hugely lead by samples and with modern day grooming covering every aspect of personal care beyond the traditional boundaries, including moisturising, eyebrow waxing and bronzing, just how important is it when it comes to your executive progression?

Co-founder of British based skin care and cosmetics line MMUK MAN Alex Dalley, this week, noted the 'explosion of professional men using anti ageing products, as well as their growing need to 'see quick and effective results with cosmetics.'

Anti-ageing products inevitably promote youth, energy and vitality and when mixed with that mature head on your shoulders, can prove to be an explosive recipe for success in business.

Meanwhile, founder of highly prestigious Jack Black skin care Emily Dalton, in a recent interview with Forbes magazine, also added some fuel to the popularity of skin care for professional men, highlighting also, just how loyal gentlemen are when they do eventually find that selection of products that are truly perfect for them.

Product loyalty generates a key aspect in modern day skin care, with that being consistency. With consistency driving the long term regeneration of the skin, when combined with intense short term revitalization, avoiding that tired and cannot wait to get home look, may just be your lynchpin to success.

With modern day gentlemen becoming more aware of product ingredients too, it's important to get a good understanding of what skin type you are, along with what ingredients generally benefit maturer skin. Moisturisers containing SPF, as well as lightweight and fresh feeling formulas that are quick to get a grasp on, top the shopping lists of professional guys, looking for that key angle of improvement in the bathroom and beyond.
