

The Institute Of The Motor Industry Calls For Licensing Of The Retail Motor Trade

Monday 20 October, 2014

Related Sectors:

Business & Finance :: Motoring ::

Scan Me:

The Institute of the Motor Industry calls for licensing of the retail motor trade as new research reveals that 70% of motorists believe it already exists

The Institute of the Motor Industry (IMI) is calling on Government to license the automotive retail sector, as it releases new consumer research that shows an underlying ignorance about the qualifications required for anyone to work on a motor vehicle.

Three quarters (71%) of motorists surveyed by the IMI said that they believe anyone working on a car commercially would have a license to do so. However, there is currently no regulation on individuals in the motor industry. 59% of drivers said they wouldn't let anyone work on their car that didn't know what they were doing, but only 10% knew how to check a technician's qualifications.

IMI says UK consumers are completely unaware of how vulnerable they are. They believe the Government is taking care of their safety and their rights, but they have a level of trust in their service provider, which may be entirely groundless.

Steve Nash, CEO of the IMI said, "The majority of motorists choose a garage or mechanic without sufficient information to verify their competence to do the job. And this is a serious cause for concern as data from Brake, the road safety charity, reported that there were over 3,000 crashes in Britain were caused by vehicle defects as a result of inadequate maintenance in 2011.

"The proliferation of hybrid vehicles and complex driver assist systems has already increased the skills requirements for effective and safe working on modern vehicles. But currently there is no industry-wide license in place to ensure service technicians are properly qualified. And without the proper training, car mechanics are increasingly putting themselves and motorists at risk.

"The template for licensing already exists IMI Accreditation and our Professional Register, so there is no excuse for the Government to delay. Yet, by our calculations there are 148,000 mechanics whose skills and current competence we cannot verify. It is vital that this issue is addressed as quickly as possible."

The IMI studies of 2,600 British driving licence holders show a level of confusion regarding the current Regulations. They also show the public do not possess the necessary knowledge to make informed decisions about who they choose to work on their car or how much they should be paying.

With 90% of the trade in favour of licensing, the IMI is seeking meetings with the leaders of all the main political parties ahead of the General Election in order to push forward the case for licensing. It has also received the 'in principle' support of several major companies and organisations including REMIT, AutoGlass, Inchcape UK, John Clarke Motor Group and TrustFord.

Research conducted through Vital Research & Statistics to 2,000 adults with a driving license – September 2014 and by BMG Research to 600 adults in July 2014.

Does licensing exist in the motor trade?

%I would never let anybody work on my car who didn't have a licence to do so.39% I would never let anybody work on my car who had didn't know what they were doing.59% I actively check whether car mechanics have a licence to work on my car before putting it into a garage.10% I would not let my loved one get their car serviced by an unexperienced team of mechanics.34% I would never forgive myself if something happened to my loved one when driving an unsafe vehicle.43% I choose a garage because of it's convenient location  80% I was not aware that there is no requirement for a license to work on a car71%

-Ends-

For media enquiries please contact:Simon White 07889 630 803
Richard O'Brien 07721 127 988

Wendy Harrison 0208 977 5200

Notes to Editors

According to the charity Brake, in 2011, 3,125 crashes in Britain were caused by vehicle defects as a result of inadequate maintenance, 52 of them causing deaths.

About the Institute of the Motor Industry (IMI):

The Institute of the Motor Industry (IMI) is the professional body for individuals working in the motor industry and the authoritative voice of the retail automotive sector. The IMI's aim is to ensure that the automotive retail sector has a skilled, competent and professional workforce that is fully equipped to keep pace with the demands of new technology and changing markets, through careers advice, IMI qualifications, accreditations and membership. The IMI's Professional Register aims to drive up standards across the automotive industry, providing consumers and customers with added confidence in the industry and the professionals who drive it.

Please visit www.theimi.org.uk to find out more.

Follow us on Twitter - @The_imi

Find us on Facebook - www.facebook.com/theimipage

Company Contact:

—

Pressat Wire

E. support@pressat.co.uk

View Online

Newsroom: Visit our Newsroom for all the latest stories:

<https://www.wire.pressat.co.uk>