- 1. 'I don't care what they think.'

Becoming too concerned with what others think can derail even the most promising venture. It's human nature to be wary of change which means entrepreneurs regularly come up against negativity from their peers when pursuing what many perceive as an unnecessarily risky career. Trying to please others can waste vital mental energy and distracts an entrepreneur from their ultimate goal. Instead entrepreneurs should focus on following their dreams and proving the doubters wrong.

- 2. 'We'll learn how.'

The only way to do new things is to learn new things. Every expert was once a novice and although the journey ahead may seem daunting, anything is possible. Instead of letting themselves become overwhelmed entrepreneurs should focus on creating an action plan which breaks down the learning process into manageable chunks and which pinpoints exactly who they need to reach out to in order to access the right support and insights.

- 3. 'It's not too late.'

Many people are put off from pursuing their business dream by the false belief that they have missed their chance. When it comes to entrepreneurship it's never too late and the life experience developed prior to taking on entrepreneurship can prove a valuable commodity.

- 4. 'Try again.'

Too many people give up when faced with a challenge. Entrepreneurship in itself is a risk and all risks come with the potential for failure. Successful entrepreneurs understand this and recognise that sometimes failure is necessary in order to find new opportunities and solutions.
