Britain spends more than £3.5 billion¹ a year feeding its love for chocolate, according to research from Nationwide Building Society.

Most Brits (74%) spend around £2 each week on getting their sugary fix - equivalent to a bar a day based on a typical big brand multipack of chocolate².

The research, which coincides with National Chocolate Week (13-19 October), highlights that the average chocolate fan could cut their £100 annual spend in half by limiting their intake to a bar every other day, says Nationwide.

This would mean a collective saving of around £1.8 billion for the UK across the year³.

And with easy-to-use apps such as Nationwide's Impulse Saver, which enables people to save any amount of cash at the touch of a button, the idea of putting regular amounts away has never been easier.

The poll also reveals that about one in ten adults (12%) do not eat chocolate, while around a quarter of people tuck into their treats immediately before bedtime, with 23% saying they snack between 9pm and midnight. However, more than four-in-ten (43%) consume their chocolate in the three hours after 6pm, hinting that they are rewarding themselves after a hard day at work.

Nationwide's Head of Savings, Tracie Pearce, said: "It's no great surprise to see that we are a nation of chocolate lovers, but the amount we spend on getting our sugary fix is very impressive when you add it up. However, our love of chocolate could also be one way of saving money – and shedding a few pounds into the bargain!

"We reckon that if people were to skip that lunchtime or mid-afternoon chocolate bar and save the cash instead – Nationwide's Impulse Saver app makes this as quick and easy as possible – small but significant savings could accumulate over the course of a year. That's money which could go towards the monthly bills."

The research also shows also revealed Britain's favourite types of chocolate. The top five treats are:

- 57% like big brand chocolate bars (e.g. Dairy Milk, Mars Bar)
- 42% like sharing bags (e.g. Maltesers, Minstrels, M&M's)
- 30% like Christmas-style boxes (e.g. Roses, Quality Street)
- 25% like luxury trays (e.g. Thorntons Classics, Lindt Lindor)
- 23% like luxury chocolate bars (e.g. Green & Black's, Hotel Chocolat)

The least preferred chocolate is trays of supermarket own brand, which are liked by just 8% of people.

Nationwide Calculations:

1 Calculated as 74% of GB adult population of 49.1 million (source: ONS 2013 data) = 36,336,866, multiplied by £2 x 52 weeks.) = £3.8 billion (rounded)

2 Based on the cost of a 365g Mars bar multipack (containing seven bars) sold in Tesco and Sainsbury's on 11/10/2014

3 36,336,866 (calculated population as above) x £1 x 52 weeks = £1.9 billion (rounded)

All figures within the survey, unless otherwise stated, are from YouGov Plc. Total sample size was 2,017 adults. Fieldwork was undertaken between 9-10 October 2014. The survey was carried out online. The figures have been weighted and are representative of all GB adults (aged 18+)

Nationwide's saving app:

Nationwide Building Society recently launched an updated version of its top rated mobile banking app, introducing two new innovative features: Impulse Saver and Quick Balance. These opt-in features are the first of their kind in the UK and allow customers to manage their money in a faster, easier and more engaging way.

Impulse Saver allows customers to transfer pre-configured amounts from their current account(s) to their savings account(s) with a couple of taps, without logging in, encouraging customers to regularly save small amounts.

Quick Balance allows customers to see their account balance at a glance without logging in, helping members keep on top of their finances anytime, anywhere and at the touch of a button.
