VisitNorwich, the official destination management organisation for the Norwich area has put together two 'Top 10' guides for making the most of a trip to Norwich over the weekend of 22 – 25 May. 'Party On' gives inspiration on how to enjoy the weekend once the music is over and 'Gatecrash the Party' is for those celebrating in Norwich without festival tickets.

Whichever applies, you can have a great time in Norwich. From throwing your own private party to sailing the Broads, from lightly jogging around the Cathedral Cloisters Alan Partridge style, to taking a selfie at Avengers: Age of Ultron HQ and viewing contemporary art from the world's most expensive living artist at Norwich Castle. Norwich offers a wealth of diverse experiences over the weekend of 22-25 May and throughout the year – so don't miss out!

Inspirational content about what to do in Norwich and how to make the most of time spent in the city will be published on www.visitnorwich.co.uk where visitors will also find practical advice and further information.

Abellio Greater Anglia runs trains between London and Norwich with trains running every 30 minutes between London Liverpool Street directly into Norwich Rail Station for those who want to be in the 'festival city' but cannot stay overnight. Advance fares can be purchased from £9 each way, journey times average 1hr 50 minutes. National Express run buses to Norwich also.

Norwich Tourist Information Centre (TIC) located in The Forum will be open to take phone calls and visits on Saturday 23rd between 9.30 am and 5.30 pm (01603 913999) and Monday 25th between 10.30 am and 3.30 pm . For social media butterflies, real time tourist information can be received using @MoreNorwich, a new initiative spearheaded by VisitEngland, England's official tourist board for English destination Tourist Information Centres.

Finally, Norwich City Hosts will be in the city centre to offer help and advice and the Discover Norwich App offers a wealth of 'on the go' information about shopping, eating and sightseeing in Norwich City Centre.

Nick Bond, Head of VisitNorwich says about the forthcoming Big Weekend celebrations, "This is a huge event for Norwich with many people travelling here who may not have visited before. Our guides and our website will assist visitors and those who already live here with further ideas of things to do as well as where to eat, drink, shop, stay and sightsee. We want everyone to have a really great time in Norwich and we want them to maximise their visit by offering information on all the other great stuff there is going on in the area."
