

What's Your First Impression Like? Asks Monarch Movements

Friday 12 August, 2016

London-based Monarch Movements reveals their top tips every business professional should use when meeting potential clients, customers and employees to ensure they establish a positive business relationship right from the beginning.

According to research from Amy Cuddy, how people initially judge a person has little to do with whether they seem skilled or competent. Instead, people subconsciously ask themselves whether they feel they can trust the person they are meeting.

With every new encounter (with clients, customers or potential employees) a person is evaluated and another person's impression of them is formed. A first impression can be nearly impossible to reverse or undo, making first encounters extremely important because they set the tone for the relationships that is to follow.

It is important to know how to create a good first impression. Sales and marketing firm Monarch Movements provide some useful tips to help a person do this.

- Listen a lot more than you talk - listening shows that a person cares more than if they offer advice. In most cases, offering advice makes the conversation about the wrong person.
- Shift the spotlight to others - tell other people what they did well. This will make them feel accomplished and more important.
- Never practice selective hearing - people who make a great first impression listen to everyone, regardless of their position.
- Choose your words - the words that a person uses can impact the attitude of others.
- Readily admit your failings - always be humble. Successful people are incredibly genuine which makes them remarkably charismatic.
