

Work on Wheels, a new concept in business travel by road

Wednesday 16 September, 2015

Efficiency and productivity are two of the most frequently used expressions in modern business.

Providing facilities to make the most of travelling time is frequently used by operators of airlines and train companies to differentiate from their competition. However these facilities often just represent a compromise, with slow or limited access WIFI, cramped working space, not to mention a public environment where confidentiality of conversations or even what you are working on, on your laptop, is virtually impossible to maintain.

Business travel is also stressful with trains to change, transfers to catch and the dreaded delays or even worse cancellations of services.

A far better solution would be to travel "door to door" in an environment which provides you with everything you need to carry on working and delivers you to your destination ready to continue business.

Work on Wheels and their fleet of mobile offices provides the solution.

"The long term value far exceeded the hire cost" - CEO of Argentous Private Equity

Work on Wheels have completely re-engineered and re-fitted a fleet of Mercedes Vianos, transforming them into luxurious office environments for up to 4 people to travel within London and the surrounding areas.

Each mobile office is equipped with the latest technology to enable passengers to work, hold private meetings on the move and stay in touch with colleagues and the office.

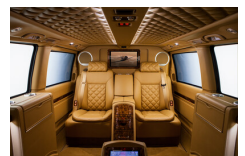

These features include:

- Fully sound proofed for a "whisper quiet" environment
- 4G/3G WiFi connectivity for smartphones, laptops and tablets
- On-board PC with two integrated monitors
- Driver in a separate compartment
- B&O premium sound system
- 4 240 volt sockets for charging or running other equipment
- Conference call facilities
- Fridge
- Rear air conditioning
- TV/DVD Player
- One shot "white out" rear windows for privacy
- Board table

Work on Wheels also provides highly trained drivers, all of whom are not only trained chauffeurs but are also fully trained in the use of the equipment each vehicle contains. Specialist drivers with security skills are also available upon request.

So if you value your time and need maximise your productivity whilst on the move, Work on Wheels' mobile offices are the perfect solution.
